THOUGHT and COMMENT

HIGH LIGHTS NOT FOR PUBLICATION AT C. C. MEETING

If Al Hill and George Roeker ever pull their stunt in front of Ziegfeld, they are going to put Julian Eltinge out of a job. Their high soprano or was it a curbstome tenor added much to the community singing.

And then we looked across the packed hall and there was E. L. Kearney with his new—we can't tell you about it, but if we had a brush we would paint it.

We are still wondering if Dr. Thomas Boyer really told C. C. Kratzer that story he told last night.

What oh, what did that bunch at the roughhouse table mean when they yelled "bedtime story" when W. T. Helms got up to speak shortly after Kratzer?

And we fear there was collusion. Wallace Snickgrove was passing a cigar to T. H. Delap. And that happened during the time negotiations were being made for the directors.

And then we wonder what Ira Vaughn meant in the way he nominated Grant Miller, Jr.

And just as we were getting ready to dig into the good turkey, a lady came in and sat down beside us. We understand she is connected with the Richmond Library. And she asked us to tell Wallace Snickgrove that he ought to have a looking glass placed in the Ladies Rest Room. Do your stuff, Wallace.

In addition to being proud of their record in community cooperation much can be said for the Business and Professional Women for the way in which they had the tables and hall decorated.

Someday soon when we can take it all in, we are going to sit down and study those banners that were scattered around the hall. The one immediately over the speakers table reading "From nothing to 27,000 in twenty-three years" is going to furnish food for thought for a few days.

The only face we could see when the Lion's gave their yell was Charles F. Donnelly. Now we know why they call them Lions.

And not forgetting the Rebekahs, who served the dinner. If you don't believe we enjoyed it, ask the lady who sat next to us. Fortunately (for us) she was on a diet and we had two helpings.

End of Mitchell Court-Martial Is Believed Near

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The presentation of testimony for the defense in the Col. William Mitchell court-martial trial was practically completed today with the exception of his own testimony, which is expected to be the star feature of the trial.

Mitchell will take the stand probably Monday. Counsel for both sides planned to hold a short session tomorrow, at which depositions and documentary evidence will be put in after, which a recess will be taken until Monday to hear Mitchell.

The only thing which stands in the way of this arrangement is the question of an agreement as to testimony, which would be given by three witnesses in far of Honolulu, if they are called.

Mitchell's counsel insists that these witnesses who are newspaper men, would testify that the navy department "handed out propaganda, claiming superiority of the battle fleet over aircraft" during the maneuvers last spring. They have asked the prosecution that such testimony be given.

President Talks On The American Business Policy

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 19.—Striking statements by President Coolidge to the New York Chamber of Commerce at its annual meeting tonight included:

"True business represents the mutual organized efforts of society to minister to the economic requirement of civilization."

"We have held to a democratic policy of cherishing the general structure of business, while holding its avenues open to the widest competition in order that its opportunities and its benefits might be given the broadest possible participation."

"It is notorious that where the Government is bad business is bad."

"If disorder should break out in your city. If there should be a conviction extending over any length of time that the right of persons and property could no longer be protected by law the value of your tall buildings would shrink to about the price of what are now water fronts of oil Crutche, or what are now corner lots in ancient Babylon."

"The people have been willing to work because they have had something to work for."

"If our people will but use these resources which have been entrusted to them, whether it is command over a large number of men or of command of large investment of capital, not selfishly, but generously, not to exploit others, but to serve others, there will be no doubt of an increased production and an increase of wealth."

QUICK ACTION SAVES CHILD FROM DEATH

DANVILLE, Nov. 19.—Quick action on the part of William Tarpley, war veteran today saved the life of his three year old stepson Alfred Podva when the child fell into a thirty foot well. Tarpley, who was irrigating his ranch heard the screams of the child and without a rope or help of any kind made his way down the slippery walls of the well rescued the youth and after a long struggle made his way to the top.

Several attempts had to be made by Tarpley to scale the slippery walls of the well with the youth. After half an hour of struggling the youth was brought to the top where he immediately began working over him, although he was on the point of exhaustion himself.

Physicians who are attending the youth state that he has a good chance for recovery.

Rhineland Suit Is Nearing Finish

(By Universal Service)

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The Rhineland annulment suit came to a sudden stop in White Plains this afternoon, while the air in the court was full of reports that the case would be withdrawn. All efforts to confirm the rumors failed, but the event preceding the abrupt adjournment, which was followed by a conference of counsel for both sides were manifested pathetic of unexpected developments.

When Lee Parson Davis, the dark wife's attorney, whose three days cross examination of Leonard Kip Rhineland reached its climax a minute before adjournment was asked to explain the halting of the case.

He replied, "I will say nothing, absolutely nothing."

Asked if he expected the ending of the trial "I have nothing to say." But there was a smile on the lawyer's lips as he spoke and he seemed quite pleased for what tomorrow holds in store. Isaac Mills, chief counsel for the Rhinelanders struck aside all interviews with the statement "all I know is that I am tired. No the suit has not been withdrawn and it is not going to be withdrawn."

CITIZENS WIN IN ELMHURST SEWER BATTLE

OAKLAND, Nov. 19.—Elmhurst citizens have at last secured unconditional surrender from the city of Oakland in the matter of sewers.

The city has agreed to furnish $80,000 for a new lower sewer along the line of the streets and not across private property. Work will be started immediately.

Elmhurst residents accepted the sewer. They refused however to open their barricade and shot-gun guarded ditch. They even refused to open it at the cost of being drowned out when the storms dump their water on the property.

Still doubting the city's good faith the warring residents refused to make promises and demanded steam shovels to dig up streets immediately for the sewer, before the rains come.

The City of Oakland acquiesced. But, Elmhurst bears the burden of the $80,000, on the ground that "They derive the benefit and should bear the burden."

The end of the war came after a long session of wrangling with the city officials, making proposals and the Elmhursters declaring "We will not."

The "We will not's" however, came only at suggestion that the ditch be opened.

War Department Allots Funds To Improve Harbor

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The war department today allotted $16,500 for improvement of the Richmond harbor, California. The funds will be transferred from those available for the San Francisco harbor fund and will be used in dredging away the bars in the outer channel of the Richmond harbor.

City Manager James A. McVittie stated last night that the funds were forth-coming as a result of a conference between himself and Major A. Schulz, district government engineer at San Francisco. The action was prompted by the declaration of ship owners that they would not touch the local wharf unless the channel was free from obstruction, McVittie said.

McVittie announced that the government would do the work and that in all probability the dredging will be started immediately.

FIGURES SHOW BIG INCREASE IN BUILDING

1924 Building Figures Are Already Exceeded By $219,677

IS GREATEST IN HISTORY

Last Three Years Have Seen Remarkable Growth In Building Here

Building permits issued in Richmond up to November 20, 1925, show that the valuation of buildings started this year already exceeds the total for the entire year of 1924 by over $200,000, according to figures on file in the office of City Building Inspector E. E. Grow.

With more than a month left in the present year there is every indication that 1925 will be a banner year for building in this city. Buildings already started are valued at $1,189,887, while during the year 1924 the total amounted to $970,210, a difference of $219,677.

During the past ten years or since 1915, every year has seen a substantial gain in the building of the city. During the present year, buildings erected will amount to nearly four times those in 1915 when the value was $331,948.

Ever since 1922 and 1923, the difference in the figures is great. In 1922, $330,944 worth of building was done while in 1923, the figures show $921,821. Thus 1925 building will amount to more than a quarter of a million dollars more than the years preceding 1924.

Building in Richmond in the month of October, 1925, alone nearly equalled that of the entire year of 1915. In the monthly reports for the years of 1924 and 1925, figures show that in only four instances this year has the building carried on fallen below that of the previous year. These months are January, February and August and September. In all other months the total has been substantially above that of 1924.

(Following are the figures for each month of 1924 and 1925, as compiled by Inspector Grow):

	1924	1925
Jan.	$121,321	$46,833
Feb.	69,170	30,215
Mar.	87,495	131,490
April	122,542	199,280
May	67,165	80,250
June	67,777	122,957
July	66,690	90,185
Aug.	66,370	65,653
Sept.	117,245	87,553
Oct.	74,965	308,999
Nov. (to date)	65,715	30,902
Dec.	43,755
TOTAL	$970,210	$1,189,887

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore finds herself, after midnight, aboard a yacht in Long Island Sound. With her are David Lacy, Pooch, Doc and Sweetie, all strangers to her and, except for Doc and Sweetie, strangers to each other. Connemara insists that Lacy take $50,000 in bills, which Pooch has mysteriously handed her. The company is surprised when another craft appears and a man on board greets David as a friend. It has been a night of wild adventure which Connemara suffered rather than announce her engagement to Doc.

"One of my college friends—he's in the government service. Let's get that anchor out. She's drifting like a seaweed in this tide."

For a few minutes McTish and Lacy were gruntingly occupied with the business of anchoring. Then, as the bloody nuisance settled herself to ride the waves as sweetly as a summer boarder rides the best porch rocking chair, Lacy got out a cigarette and lit it greedily.

"This has been something of a night," he said. "I need stimulant. McTish, you keep on watch and I'll gather myself a drop of coffee and get on some dry clothes. Ladies, how's your various thirsts?"

"I'd love a cup of coffee," I heard about it when I first came on board, but it never appeared," said Connemara. "I'm hungry, too."

"So'm I," confided Sweetie. "I could eat a hot dog made out of my own pet cauldron."

"Oh, do you like dogs?" asked Connemara, interested. "I'm frightfully fond of them—I have the most adorable police dog named—"

Sweetie was presently changed into a dapper youth.

"Named Rex, I'll bet a million," said Lacy.

"Then you lose. His name is Athos."

"What's d'you know about Athos, Sister?" asked Lacy wonderingly. "Did someone suggest the name to you?"

"Don't be silly. Why shouldn't I know about Athos, even if it was ages ago that I read 'The Three Musketeers'?"

"This is interesting. I didn't know that girls in your walk of life had definite literary tastes. I must look into this further. In the meantime, please excuse me."

He disappeared into the little bunk room at the back of the cabin. Sweetie looked understandingly at Connemara.

"It ain't the only thing he don't know, I betcha," she said. "He sounds to me like an awful bunch of ready language. But well, too, in a way, if you get what I mean. Class, you know. I always like 'em class. Gawd, I wish I had some dry clothes. I'm soaking. And I've lost my lipstick, and my gum—" she hastily explored her left stocking, and came up beaming. "Say, what d'you know! Lookit!" She displayed a small shiny vanity case and a package of chewing gum. "They ain't hurt a bit neither."

She took a piece of the gum and passed another to Connemara. "Here," she said, "nobody ever said of me that I wasn't square with other ladies."

"Thanks," said Connemara. "Thanks awfully, but—well—the fact is, I don't chew gum."

"Oh!" said Sweetie, frankly staring. "Why not? Go fairs like that?"

"No," said Connemara, improvising wildly, for she could see that Sweetie was all ready to be offended at the refusal of her offering. "but I've got an awfully fussy old maid aunt and she made me promise I wouldn't ever chew gum. You know," she went on, to change the subject. "I imagine that man"—she nodded toward the bunk room—"that man would lend you some clothes and you could dry your mine are dry enough, but they're in rags, thanks to that wretch," she indicated Pooch.

"The dirty dawg," said Sweetie sympathetically. "Say, why don't you grind your heel in his face now he's tied up? I would, believe me, if he'd roused me. If I had a needle and thread, I'd mend you up like a streak o' lightning. I'm quite a girl with the needle. I used to be head skirt hand at a big Fifth Avenue shop. Honest, I did."

"Well, for Heaven's sake," said Connemara, "why did you ever leave a good job for a wild life like this?"

"I got sick of it. Sewing, sewing, all day long on nice clothes 'n I could ever have myself, and the forlady findin' fault—reg'lar poison ivy she was—an' all day long in the house at work! Then, when I'd get out to the movies, at night I'd see life like it ought to be. You know—something 'doin' every minute. An' then Doc, he come along—an' here we are."

"Here we are indeed," said Connemara. "And I wonder when we're ever going to get away. Women can certainly do impulsive things. Miss Sweetie, I don't like to call you that, it sounds too—too—"

"Don't mind that. You can call me Gloria-Swanson-Mary-Pickford-Lillian-Gish, if you wanta, but there ain't gon' to be honest-to-Gawd monikers spilled on this party. Say, I do wish I could mend you up. You look like somethin' the cat brought in in that old coat and that dirty white stuff hanging out below. Hey, mister, in there—"

"Coming, Sweetie," said David Lacy, sticking his head out of the bunk room. "Just waiting for the coffee to boil up for the third time."

"You got any sewing things, needle and thread and scissors?" demanded Sweetie. "If you have, clear out o' that hole down there and let us ladies have it. We got to do a little private work, her and me."

David Lacy appeared now, with a tray containing steaming coffee in cups without saucers, an opened can of condensed milk, and some stray lumps of sugar. In his other hand he had a large tin of crackers. He was dressed in fresh dry clothes, and his hair, though still wet, was brushed, and the wetness gave rather the effect of fashionable slickness.

"Class," said Sweetie, whispering to Connemara. "What'd I tell you? He's class. Oh, boy, that coffee smells good! Come to mamma, darling!" She seized a cup, half emptied the condensed milk in it, added four lumps of sugar and seized a handful of crackers. Naturally she at once became incapable of further speech.

The coffee smelled and tasted good to Connemara too. She drank it gratefully, but her mind was on Sweetie's offer of a moment before. Connemara was suffering acutely from the knowledge that she was grotesquely dressed. Lacy had taken coffee to McTish and stayed beside him, talking in a low tone. This was Connemara's opportunity.

"Let's go into that place—where he was, and see if we can't find some dry things for you. And it there's anything to sew with, and you would get me together a little I'd be eternally grateful."

Sweetie gulped the last of her coffee, crammed the last of her crackers in her mouth. "Awri," she said, "I'm strong enough to do anything now."

The two girls moved together to the bunk room. A little rummaging brought to light some men's clothes, and with considerable giggling Sweetie was presently changed into a smallish, dapper youth in correct yachting get up of white trousers and blue coat. The clothes were large for her, but the general effect was good. She spread her own things to dry as best she could in the limited space, and then looked about her capably. A small box on the shelf that was evidently the dressing table—for there was a mirror above it and a comb on it—caught her eye, and she opened it and brought out in triumph a huge needle, a spool of white thread, and a pair of scissors.

"No thimble—but it don't matter. Say, take off them things and let's see what we can do."

"CAMP JINX" IS TO BE HELD BY GIRL RESERVES

A "Camp Jinx" will be given next Wednesday by the Girl Reserve of Richmond Union high school. The club has been divided into the groups, each being responsible for a stunt, some yells or songs. As this is to be a jinx, everyone is to wear gym-bloomers, middie and Girl Reserve tie. The party will be from 4:15 to 6:30, supper being served at 5:45.

A short program was given at the meeting of the Girl Reserves, consisting of a dance by Katherine Fahrenholtz, and a violin solo by Mae Belle Ball, accompanied by Geraldine Quinly.

Fern Scarlett led a short discussion on the subject "How to apply the Golden Rule about the school." The girls met yesterday in the sewing room, after school, to make scrap-books to be sent to the Children's homes.

The paper drive which the reserves have been conducting, ends today with hundreds of pounds of papers and magazines, collected. The papers have not yet been sold, but it is expected that they will bring enough funds to aid materially in filling the baskets of needy families on Thanksgiving.

A Charming Supper Party

Now that the winter days are here, the cry after the theatre is "Let's go where it's warm and comfy." At such times and on Sunday afternoons which are often rainy and cold, what could be cozier than an informal supper party at home?

With the tea wagon drawn up before the fire and a savory odor rising from the electric grill and with everybody helping, there is so much fun in life, still. Even the stiff old bachelor will become surprisingly human if he is told to slice the bread and the frivolous girl will become surprisingly domestic over the toast making.

If you will plan ahead, you can always have the makings of a most satisfactory, even festive supper in the house. The following menus are all good and require but a little time to prepare.

Creamed Tuna Fish On Toast
Hot Chocolate
Olives and Cheese Crackers

Hot Asparagus Tips on Toast
Hot Tea

Cheese between slices of Boston Brown Bread
toasted Pickles

Coffee

Crackers

Oyster Stew

Damson Plum Jam

Tea

One girl whose popularity was due largely to the fact that there was an unfailing supply of good eats in the house, such as canned mushrooms, fruits for salad, and meats for creamed dishes, could always count on her coterie of friends to come to her house and gather around for a jolly good talk about the football game or plays for tomorrow's dance, while they toasted slices of Boston brown bread and made rarebit and fudge. She managed to have something always in the house by this very unique plan.

She got several pasteboard boxes and on the lid wrote a menu. Then she put into the box all the ingredients required for that menu even to the can of milk so that there might be no chance of finding something forgotten at the last minute when all the stores would be closed. When a box was empty she refilled it promptly and consequently was the envy of all the set for the quick and easy way which she achieved the role of ideal hostess.

MISS COMPSON IN CROOK ROLE AT RICHMOND

It was a crook role in George Meiford's Paramount picture, "The Miracle Man," that first elevated Betty Compton to stardom. Now Betty's back on the screen at the Richmond theatre in another crook role—but this time in a fast-moving comedy, "Paths to Paradise," which opens today.

"Paths to Paradise" directed by Clarence Badger, at one time associated with Mack Sennett, was written for the screen by Keene Thompson from Paul Armstrong's play, "The Heart of a Thief." Miss Compton is featured with Raymond Griffith, the high hat scream, in the leading roles.

Tom Santschi, Fred Kelsey and Bert Woodruff appear in the supporting cast of the production, which opens with a guide showing a few sightseers through San Francisco's Chinatown. He informs them that Betty is queen of a gang of counterfeiters, and when the rubber-necks leave the bunch split the money they paid to inspect the place.

Then a taxi driver hops in, announcing that he has a sucker who wants to see a typical Chinese joint. The collar is transformed accordingly, and Ray Griffith walks into the picture, and the fun is on. Griffith is a clever gentleman crook, and what he doesn't do to these poor under-world thieves isn't worth mentioning.

Remember Griffith in "Forty Winks" and "The Night Club"? "Paths to Paradise" is funnier than the two of them put together.

Other features on the same program include "Soup to Nuts" a Neal Burns comedy; "Felix Baffled by Banjos" a Felix the cat comedy.

Interclass Cage Games At High

Much interest is being manifested in the girls' interclass basketball at Richmond Union high school. Two or three games are played every athletic night. GO WEST

Buster Keaton in a scene from his latest comedy, "Go West," which comes to the California Theatre today.

Buster Keaton In Picture At California

Buster Keaton's latest comedy, "Go West," which comes to the California theatre today, is his first western picture and the most elaborate laugh provoker he has ever made. The frozen-faced star spent several months filming the fun spectacle of the great open spaces, which was produced by Joseph M. Schenck for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release.

Thousands of cattle and scores of real cowboys take part in the big comedy feature. Keaton and his company lived on the Arizona desert for a month to insure realism in the ranch scenes. Special trains were chartered to transport the stars from Texas to Kingman, Arizona, from where they were driven sixty miles across country to the rancho.

A Jersey cow that was insured for $100,000 during the making of the comedy has an important part in the development of the plot in Buster's newest laugh riot.

"Go West" is a scream from start to finish. As a drifter whose lack of personality prevents him from landing jobs in the southern cotton fields, the Canadian timber country, the teaming cities of the eastern seaboard and other sections of the United States, the youth finally lands in the proverbial region where men are men.

During his migration via the box-car route Buster always is just one jump ahead of the train crew's shoes. His wanderings are crammed with hilarious adventures. When he is kicked off his side-door Pullman on the desert he tries conclusions with a wild mustang, but finds that kind of transportation is even riskier than rough-riding freight trains. So finding a pair of discarded chaps and spurs, he walks to a nearby ranch—and is hired as cowboy!

The plot then begins to thicken with a succession of screamingly funny situations.

The able supporting cast in "Go West" includes Howard Truax, Katharine Myers, Buster's new leading lady, and Ray Thompson. Keaton personally directed and wrote the picture.

Other features on the same program include "Lewis vs. Munn," a study in wrestler's art; "Varieties," a scenic novelty; "International News," Larry Canelo, at the organ.

The only successful substitute for brains is silence.—Eau Claire (Wis.) Leader.

CLOTHIERS ARE SWAMPED WITH 46 TO 3 SCORE

It wasn't basketball—it was a massacre.

Thus is the alleged cage game between the Pullmans and the McRackens at the Roosevelt gym last night in the Richmond city league to be described. The final score of 46 to 3, favor Pullman, indicates just how true that statement is.

Swinging into the game fiercely at the first whistle and continuing to play like wild men for the entire game they not only held the clothiers helpless, but had no difficulty in swamping them under the heavy score.

Daley, forward for the shop men, shot through the poor defense of the McRackens crew time and again to shoot baskets. He scored 22 of his team's points—ten baskets and two fouls. Rod Gadberry came next with ten of the remaining points.

Moore, McRackens guard, was "high point" man for the clothiers. He got one basket and Kiraly, forward, looped in one foul.

The showing made by the Pullman's in this game bids fair to show their strength and the remaining teams in the league are now pointing to a victory over them.

Following are the lineups and scores of each man:

Pullmans—Kamb, f. 8; Pryde, f. 2; Daley, f. 22; Gadberry, c. 10; Cornell, g. 4; Nelson, g. 0; Tamm, g. 0; Gould, g. 0.

McRackens—Healey, f. 0; Kiraly, f. 1; Nichol, c. 0; McLaughlin, g. 0; Moore, g. 2.

S. O. BEATS SANTA FE

In the first game of the evening, a little closeness was experienced when the No. 2 team of the Standard Oil company battled the Santa Fe and lost 19 to 16. This game was by far the main attraction of the evening, and provided plenty of thrills for the well filled bleachers.

Arthers was the backbone and center of the Santa Fe team. Playing sterling floor work both on defense and offense he rung up a dozen of the 19 tallies. As far as the Standard was concerned all of the cagers played about equal, but Libby, forward, did the best on the shots, scoring 8 points.

The lineups and points by each man:

Standard—Libby, f. 8; Carson, f. 0; Cornell, f. 0; Luckenbaugh, c. 4; Prolo, c. 0; Schupp, g. 0; Noverini, g. 0; Datchett, g. 0.

Santa Fe—Hunt, f. 2; Verra, f. 6; Arthers, c. 12; Coakley, g. 0; Grande, g. 0.

SHOPS-POTTERS WIN BOWLING LEAGUE GAMES

The Machine Shops took three out of four points from the Engineers in the Pacific Sanitary Bowling league games at the Seventh street drives last night. While this was happening the Potters were doing the same thing to the Foundry at the alley close by. Following are the scores of the games:

PLAYERS SERVE PRESS
NEW YORK, Nov. 19. Following a brief visit here by Commissioner Landis it was announced that big league ball players may continue to write articles for the newspapers but they will be held responsible for everything appearing under their name. The controversy arose over an article which was "written" by Peckinpaugh but he claimed he never saw it.

WALKER WILL BOX
NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—It was officially announced here today by Tex Rickard that Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, would defend his title at Madison Square Garden in an early show. Mary Won't Take Wedding Ring Off

It was during the filming of "Little Annie Rooney" Mary Pickford's classic of the tenements, coming to the California theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

Mary, garbed as "Little Annie" was entirely surrounded by about forty young hoodlums, ready for a "gang fight" in the picture.

But Mary was holding up the show. It was all because of that troublesome bit of jewelry that her famous husband Douglas Fairbanks gave her five years ago. That slender wedding ring was causing all the trouble and holding up a regiment of the highest priced cameramen, directors and helpers in the world. Mary has never taken it off, since the day of her wedding, and refuses to do so. It has to be hidden from prying eye of the camera, because "Little Annie" is supposed to be a girl of fourteen, and girls of fourteen do not wear wedding rings.

So a very lucky chap was holding Mary's hand and sewing a signet ring over the wedding ring to hide it, while director and cameramen heaped maledictions on the heads of Doug and Mary for their devotion, which extends to such little things as wedding rings.

7:30 p. m. Baptists vs. Christians.
8:10 p. m. Y. M. D. vs. St. Edmund's.
8:50 p. m. Presbyterians vs. Wanderers.
9:30 p. m. Wesley vs. Lutherans.

At the end of the season the winner of the league will be presented with a handsome shield trophy, as a reward for their work.
